

IS HELM FOR WHISKY.

Charge Made That His Forces Combined With Interests in Anderson County.

According to reports received in Danville, Congressman Harvey Helm, who is a candidate for re-election, made an unmerciful attack on Democrats who have scratched the ticket in the past in his speech at Lawrenceburg last Monday. It was rumored that Congressman Helm had planned to make the attack in Danville last Saturday, but on account of the large number of independents in Boyle county, held up this part of the speech until he spoke in Lawrenceburg, where the independent element is comparatively small. While the editors of the Advocate believe in voting the straight ticket, yet we are inclined to take back to the fold any of those who have made mistake and are willing to repent and come back. The Democratic party needs all the regular men, bolters and independents it can get and we do not believe in delivering insults to any class of voters. Congressman Helm seems to have started out to wreck the party or win the race. A large number of Helm supporters in Danville are busy putting out an insult, similar to one started from Stanford last year which is calculated to wreck the party if it is not stopped. Last year Stanford publicly offered the insult; this year it is being clandestinely passed around. If the Democrats want to succeed in this district, they had better get Helm off the track or force him to change his tactics. In line with the current rumor of Helm's antagonism to the State administration at Frankfort is the further report from Lawrenceburg that the Helm henchmen combined with the whisky men to defeat the McCreary forces at the recent convention and did defeat them. The question is being asked, is Helm combining with the liquor men in Lawrenceburg and the temperance people in the dry territory. How is he on the liquor question anyway?—Danville Advocate.

Harvey Helm's Position on Temperance Legislation.

(Stanford Interior Journal.)
Col. Jack Chinn, of Harrodsburg, withdrew from the race for Congress in this district Monday, announcing his withdrawal in a speech at Lancaster in which he proved the belief of many Democrats that he had been merely a stalking horse for Judge Sullivan throughout the entire contest.
In attempting to injure Harvey Helm all he could in his valedictory Col. Chinn declared that the fight would now be waged between Sullivan and Helm with the Whisky Democrats backing Helm. As Col. Chinn has frequently stated in his own canvass that if the "night riders, toll gate raiders and fox hunters" would vote for him the other fellows could have the "preachers and prohibitionists" one might be inclined to wonder whether Col. Chinn gave the subject sober thought before asserting so positively that the whisky men have made such a sudden switch in their preference.
Col. Chinn wants to know what is Congressman Helm's attitude and asks if he will oppose the shipment of liquor into dry territory.
The Interior Journal is hardly inclined to believe that Mr. Helm will feel violently constrained to give Col. Chinn a categorical answer to this question, in view of Chinn's own conduct in the present race.
As a temperance newspaper at all times, however, the Interior Journal feels inclined to state right here for itself that it knows Congressman Helm's position on this matter, and is completely satisfied with it. It knows that he stands pledged to support the Shepard-Kenyon bill in Congress, which will prohibit the inter-state shipment of liquor into dry territory.
It further knows that leading temperance men in the district who have inquired his position on this bill—the only measure the temperance people have asked him to support—have been fully satisfied that he is heartily for it and pledged himself for it long before Col. Chinn or any one else with an ulterior purpose to serve, sought to embarrass him by asking him such a question.
The charge that Harvey Helm has aligned himself with the whisky interests is as base a falsehood as the accusation made by a Danville paper that he fought McCreary and his friends.

It is said that the mast crop will be unusually large in Adair county. The beech and hickory trees are full. Where the stock law does not interfere the boys will have a fine time a little later.

HAS HELM PROMISED

The Collectorship? Various Rumors Afloat. Can He Deliver the Goods?

Has Congressman Harvey Helm promised the collectorship provided he is re-elected and a Democrat is chosen President in November? This is a question which is going the rounds, says the Danville Advocate. It is talked that Mr. Paul Goddard, of Harrodsburg, will be the collector if Helm's influence can land him the position. It is also whispered around that one, two and possibly three prominent Boyle county Democrats have been promised Congressman Helm's influence in securing the job. If these reports are true, it is unreasonable to suppose that similar promises have been made in Stanford, Richmond, Nicholasville, Lawrenceburg and elsewhere. A reliable Danville man charges that Helm promised to endorse him for a position in the Democratic congress last December a year ago. By agreement with Congressman Helm, the said Danville man made a trip to Washington only to find Mr. Helm seeking the help of other Kentucky Congressmen to land the place for a Nicholasville man. Helm gave the Danville man whom he had promised to support a cold deal after making an appointment for him to come to Washington. Therefore the Danville man in question wishes to warn those to whom the collectorship has been promised to require Congressman Helm to guarantee the promise by having a reliable bonding company stand behind the obligation in order to make it certain. However, there is a national law prohibiting any Congressman from promising jobs, except secretaries, and the candidate who makes such promises must forfeit his office after election. Each candidate along with his campaign expenses at the general election must make oath that he has not promised positions of any kind save exceptions above. So if it is true that Congressman Helm has been attempting to trade the collectorship off, the supposed beneficiaries should study the law which will show them that these promises are worthless and so known by Congressman Helm.

At 6:30 o'clock a most tempting lunch was spread. The refreshment hour over, the party started home, arriving about 9 o'clock, all loud in their praise of the enjoyment of the day.

Whiskey Trust

And State Administration Crowd Col. Jack Chinn Off the Track, According to His Announcement.

State Administration Backs Sullivan; Whiskey Trust Backs Helm, and Left alone With the Fox Hunters, Col. Chinn, Quits.

Col. Jack Chinn, who has been making a vigorous campaign for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district, announced his withdrawal at the conclusion of a red-hot speech delivered to a large audience in the court house at Lancaster Monday afternoon. The following are the reasons given by Col. Chinn for quitting the race: "At the beginning of this contest, there was no special lineup and the whisky people and the temperance people in large numbers were for me. As a member of the Kentucky Senate, I had been successful in securing what Anderson county wanted in the way of legislation and had warm friends there, although I knew the whisky trust hated me as I had been instrumental in passing laws which made it possible for every county in the Eighth Congressional district to become dry. The whisky forces knew that if I went to Washington I would introduce a bill making it unlawful to ship liquor from another State into dry territory. The word was passed around after Helm's visit to Lawrenceburg and the whisky people turned against me in forty-eight hours. All of them are now backing Helm to a man. Although I did my best for the administration at Frankfort last fall and helped to elect the ticket, still they think that they are under greater obligations to Jere Sullivan and I am informed are doing their utmost to line up their temperance forces behind him. So with the temperance people flocking to Sullivan and the liquor people to Helm, I find my candidacy backed by the fox hunters and tobacco people and they are in the minority, and therefore I gracefully retire." It is said that Col. Chinn made one of the best speeches ever heard in the Garard county court house to one of the largest and most enthusiastic audience ever gathered there. Hundreds of influential citizens begged him to reconsider his action and stay in the race but he remained firm, declaring that the two great factions in the district had crowded him out.—Danville Advocate.

Death of a Good Woman.

Last Wednesday afternoon about the hour of 3 o'clock, Mrs. Margaret Perryman, who was the beloved wife of Dr. R. H. Perryman, died at her late home near Ella, this county. The deceased was about sixty-five years old, and her affliction dates back several months. The deceased was a sister of 'Squire William Wolford and Mr. Milton Wolford, and she leaves many relatives throughout the county. She was a lady for whom every body had the utmost respect, and she will be sadly missed in the neighborhood where she resided. Her christian character warrants the belief that she was at peace with her God.

The husband, who is well known in this town, has the sympathy of its inhabitants. He should go to God, who alone can comfort in such a trying hour, and be ready himself for the Master's call, for he knows not the day nor the hour when he too will be called hence. It is hard to part with a loving companion, but it should be a joy to know that she is now in a world where sorrow and afflictions are unknown.

3000 MAJORITY.

Hon. Jere A. Sullivan Will Get a Rousing Majority in Madison

Hon. Jere Sullivan has always been loyal to Madison county, and if chosen as the congressman for the district he will be loyal to every county. He will have back of him a record of something accomplished. No Democrat in the State has been more loyal to the party and last year when a report, started at Stanford, came very nearly wrecking the party, he exerted his best energies in restoring harmony. In the light of such facts should a Stanford man be honored over him this year. Are the Democrats willing to forget so soon, such patriotic and unselfish devotion to party principles. Old Madison proposes to do her share on election day and the leaders are predicting that Sullivan will not poll a majority of less than 2,500, with a possibility of 3,000. Madison is going to give her favorite son a majority that will be difficult to overcome, for locally we owe him a debt of gratitude and as Democrats we are bound to him for his loyalty in the past and his liberality both in time and money.—Richmond Climax.

His left arm and left side were partially paralyzed, and for a time he was in a critical condition. His friends in Columbia are anxious concerning his condition, and hope that he will soon recover. His children and relatives here went to his bedside upon notification of his illness.

Hon. J. A. Sullivan, Democratic candidate for Congress, will speak at court-house next Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

WARNING!--DEMOCRATS.

Harvey Helm Objected to Taking Casey and Adair Counties in the Eighth Congressional District.

Editor Adair County News:
I have it upon reliable authority that Congressman Harvey Helm strongly opposed the addition of both Adair and Casey counties to the Eighth Congressional district. Now that his opposition proved futile, we understand that he is attempting to deceive the voters into the idea that he stood by them and endeavored to have the law enacted. It is personally known to me and also publicly known that Hon. Jere Sullivan went before the redistricting committee and insisted that these counties be added to the district. All Democrats in these counties should take the trouble to make a thorough investigation on this subject before casting their ballots.

Respectfully
W. Owen McIntyre
Editor Danville Advocate.
